Cepsa Química expands digital presence with a Knowde storefront

Cepsa Química, a leading chemical company headquartered in Madrid, Spain, has launched a storefront on Knowde, the marketplace for ingredients, polymers and chemistry.

Research and development (R&D) professionals, engineers and buyers can now use Knowde’s simple, one-click process to search, filter, collaborate with online experts, request samples and quotes, and purchase a wide range of Cepsa Química products, including phenol, acetone and solvents.

Additionally, Cepsa Química will soon include on its storefront its new sustainable offering, a responsible and innovative solution that introduces renewable and recycled raw materials into the production of phenol. With this new range of products, marketed under the NextPhenol brand, the company takes a further step towards strengthening its commitment to sustainable development, while helping customers meet their environmental goals.

“Our customers will be able to find our innovative and sustainable materials quickly and easily using our Knowde storefront, which will help them shorten development time and get their products to market faster,” said José María Solana, Commercial Director at Cepsa Química. “Knowde will also help us reach and engage new markets and open new business opportunities.”

Among its key features, Knowde has built the industry’s most powerful search capabilities, enabling users to explore materials by chemistry, application, function, technical properties and more, including a focus on sustainable ingredients. Additionally, KnowdeConcierge™ offers users access to expert advice and insight on brand and product pages, and ensures prompt replies to inquiries.

“Knowde is building the largest marketplace on the planet, bringing the speed, ease and convenience of the modern ecommerce experience to chemicals,” said Dan Haas, Chief Commercial Officer for Knowde. “We want to create a single place where all buyers and sellers converge and change the way business is conducted in the industry.”

For companies like Cepsa Química, a Knowde storefront offers everything they need to move online quickly to meet the new needs of customers who want a better online buying experience. Knowde also provides targeted digital marketing tools to build storefront traffic, and robust analytics to support data-driven decision making.
